THE CHIEF LEGATEE

BY ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

OUT TO-DAY

Author of "The Leavenworth Case," etc.

A distinguished wedding in the élite of New York society, the young couple, both of whom are wealthy in their own right, registered at an exclusive hotel, gone to their room—and ten minutes later the bride has completely disappeared! This opening situation leads to a tale of mystery in Anna Katharine Green's best style.

Colored frontispiece. 12mo. $1.35 net.

IN ANOTHER GIRL'S SHOES

BY BERTA RUCK

Author of "His Official Fiancée," "The Boy With Wings," etc.

Vivacious, absorbing, interesting and humorous are but poor words to express the real, sparkling life of this novel. From the very first scene, in which Vera Vayne, the "movie" actress, literally pushes the demure, well-bred little heroine into her shoes as the war widow of the aristocratic Captain George Meredith, to the closing chapter, in which the heroine comes into her own, there is not a dull page or a stupid line in it.

THE ADVENTURES of a DESPATCH RIDER

BY CAPTAIN W. H. L. WATSON

A motor-cycle despatch rider describes his adventures at the front—you feel almost as if you have to dodge the big shells yourself as you read it!

Every Year

the biggest issue of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the Fall Announcement Number (this year September 23).

Despite the fact that many publishers consider advertising space in this issue worth double price* there is no increase in rate for it. That must be the reason for the 140 odd pages of advertising this number always carries.

1 Have you sent in your advertising copy yet? On account of the size of this issue copy for which proofs are desired should be in our hands by Sept. 1.

2 The Fall Reference List in this issue is, next to the Advertising, the bookseller's guide all thru the fall. Have you sent our editorial department three copies of your fall announcement list? Will you not do so at once?

It is the comprehensiveness of this List, and particularly of the Advertising in this issue that gives the number its special value, for the bookseller has become accustomed to refer first to the latter for information regarding forthcoming publications; and he is naturally influenced by the publishers' own estimates of their relative importance.

The Cab of the Sleeping Horse

John Reed Scott

Author "Colonel of the Red Hussars," etc. 12° Frontis. $1.35

A thrilling story of intrigue in diplomatic circles in Washington. Though not a detective story, it will appeal to that class of readers, since it has to do with a deep-laid international plot and its clever frustration by the U. S. Secret Service Agents.

A Slav Soul, and Other Stories

Alexander Kuprin

Introduction by Stephen Graham. 12° $1.50.

Kuprin is of the new Russian school, so popular just now, and is generally considered the greatest living humorist of Russia. The volume has passed under the able editorship of Stephen Graham.

The Quest of the Golden Valley

Belmore Browne

Author "The Conquest of Mt. McKinley," etc. 12° Illus. $1.25

Belmore Brown has written a stirring story for boys which imparts the whole lore of the frontier and law of the wild. Eight vivid illustrations, by the author, accompany the text.

Gai Saber

Maurice Hewlett

Author "The Forest Lovers," etc. 12° $1.75.

In these impassioned poems the author's fancy ranges from ancient saga and classic mythology to the stirring if fearful days of current history—themes of heroic as well as tender appeal.

Midsummer Motoring in Europe

De Courcy W. Thom

8° Illus. $2.50

A fascinating account of an anti-bellum trip through Belgium, Normandy, Brittany, Touraine, Württemberg and Bayaria. A splendid account of the Passion Play, at Oberammergau, is given.

A Brief History of Panics

Clement Juglar

Trans. by DeC. W. Thom. 12° $1.25.

The author of "Midsummer Motoring" has translated, edited and brought to date this decidedly important analysis of the periodical appearance of Panics in the United States.

The Seven Wonders of the Ancient World

Edgar J. Banks

12° Fully Illus. $1.50.

How many of you, who so glibly let the phrase fall from your tongue, can recite the Seven Wonders? How many of you know the stories? This book is for grown-ups, though not beyond young people.

The Cambridge Book of Poetry for Children

Edited by

Kenneth Grahame

8° Decorated. $1.50.

This collection of verse for children is in reality an introduction to English poetry. The author of "Dream Days" and "The Golden Age" has compiled an anthology that fills a hitherto vacant niche.

War and Humanity

James M. Beck

Former Assist. Atty. General of the U. S. 12°

This volume by the famous author of the "Evidence in the Case," of which over a million copies have been sold, presents an analysis of the rights and immunities of non-combatants and of the duty of the U. S.

The Myrtle Reed Cook Book

Myrtle Reed

(Olive Green.) 12° Over 500 pp. $1.50.

Few people have known that the famous author of "Lavender and Old Lace" and the eminent author of cook books, "Olive Green," were one and the same person. This is a collection of her best recipes.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men of course do seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves, by way of amends, to be a help and ornament thereunto."—BACON.

THE LEGAL LIMITS OF ADVERTISING COMPARISON

WE reprint elsewhere, because it raises a number of novel points, a letter forwarded by an author to a number of law book publishers, warning them to have nothing to do with a certain recently published competing legal treatise. The writer makes two main charges: First, that he had been done substantial damage by the implication in the later work of the non-existence or incompleteness of his own work which he claims to be "standard." And in the second place, that the publication by his publishers of a rival work constituted "a violation . . . of the trust relation into which they entered when they contracted to publish my book."

It may be noted that there is nowhere in these charges any question of copyright infringement. The issues concern rather the legal and ethical aspects of certain definite publishing practices and as such are of interest to authors and publishers of textbooks and general non-fiction no less than to those in the legal field.

The first charge raises the question as to how far an author may go in his preface—and from this it is but the briefest step to ask how far the publisher may go in his statement on the book's jacket or in his advertisements—without becoming libelous. Where, in the progress from "blurb" to "Blurb," does one overstep legal bounds—if at all? From "the book of the year" and "the great American novel at last," to "never before treated with such thoroughness," or the balder statement "never before treated," the steps are gradual and obvious. And yet even this last statement, involving as it does by implication a denial of the existence of any other book on the subject, does not seem to us for one moment libelous, but merely an annoying and unfortunate kind of exaggeration. Extravagant statements, whether backed by the publisher's or author's sincere belief or not, have by long custom of the trade become a nuisance to be tolerated as good naturedly as possible. That this particular author should resent the implication of his rival's preface is not altogether unnatural, but that he or his counsel should see in it grounds for possible libel proceedings seems indeed to be making a mountain out of a mole hill. Were his contention correct there would be no peace of mind to any publisher who spoke of his book as one "filling a long-felt want" or to any author who said in his preface, "There is obviously no necessity to comment upon the need for this work."

But the second contention seems even more absurd. Were such an interpretation of law sound, a publishing house such as Macmillan's would not be allowed to publish more than one text-book on Algebra; or, to parallel the cited case more closely, a publisher having a work on general biology on his list might not thereafter issue a smaller work on the biology of the invertebrates.

A more direct legal answer to this contention, however, is found in the recent decision in the English case of Cescinsky v. G. Routledge Sons, Ltd., summarized in last week's PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY. In this case Cescinsky, author of four volumes on "English Furniture of the Eighteenth Century" and "English Domestic Clocks," sued for an injunction which should prevent his publishers, G. Routledge & Sons, Ltd., from publishing a work on "Antique Furniture" by another author who covered much the same ground. Cescinsky claimed that the publication of the last named work was a breach of an implied term in his agreements with his publishers that they would do nothing to injure or diminish the value of his royalties. The judge's ruling on this point was that to assume that such an implied term included a covenant not to publish even a competing book was "much too wide a covenant to imply."

As to how far a publisher is responsible for statements by his authors reflecting indirectly upon other books published by him no iron-clad rule can be laid down. Honesty and absolute fairness toward all authors, either his own or another publisher's, is the aim of all reputable publishers. Nor, obviously, would a publisher want to hurt the sale of one work on his own list by maligning it in the pages of another.

Yet there is absolutely no reason why, providing he believes it true, a publisher should not allow one of his authors to say, or himself to say on jacket or in advertisements, that a certain work is the "best" or the "most complete" or the "most readable" presentation of a certain subject. At best, and taking these words in the literal sense—in which in cases of the kind they are never taken—they are but an expression of personal opinion.

AUTHOR RAISES QUESTIONS REGARDING COMPETING PUBLICATIONS OF HIS OWN PUBLISHER

A RECENT issue of the Authors' League Bulletin reprints a letter from a writer of legal text-books which raises some novel questions of publishing competition. The letter says in part:

"You are hereby cautioned not to sell nor to show to customers a treatise on Federal Criminal Procedure, by John Elliott Byrne, recently published by Callaghan & Co., of Chicago. I am instructed by counsel, in whose opinion I concur, that this is libelous.

"The preface contains the following statement:

"For a number of years the writer has realized the necessity for a work including in comprehensive yet concise manner the law of Criminal Procedure in the Federal Courts. Heretofore this law has been ascertainable only by means of a search thru the hundreds of United States Statutes and thousands of cases."

"It was the intention of the writer and publisher of the preface, and it is a clear and fair innuendo from this statement to those who have not examined my treatise upon Federal Practice, which has been well known for more than thirty years to the law book trade and to lawyers practising in the Courts of the United States, that my book does not contain a statement of the law of Criminal Procedure in the Federal Courts; and to those who know that my book contains such a chapter to charge that such chapter is incomplete and not comprehensive. Since the charge is made by the publishers of my book, members of the profession as well as law booksellers are likely to give credence thereto. This statement is absolutely false. My book upon Federal Practice contains a chapter devoted to this subject which, altho concise, is more full and comprehensive than the description of the same in Mr. Byrne's book; altho by the liberal use of printer's fat as well as by larger type and thicker paper an attempt has been made to make it appear that Mr. Byrne's book contains a more full treatment of the subject.

"Moreover, the publication of a rival work to my Federal Practice is a violation by my publishers of the trust relation into which they entered when they contracted to publish my book. If you assist them you become a confederate in their unlawful conduct and under the doctrine first formulated in Lumley v. Gye, and which is discussed in Cyc, as well as in other standard books, you will become jointly liable with them for the resultant damages. Each copy of Byrne's book which you sell will prevent the sale of a copy of my Federal Practice. You will consequently be held responsible by me for at least the price of each copy sold by you and also for the damage to my reputation as a legal author and to the reputation of my book, if you continue to sell and to expose for sale this rival and libelous publication."

NOTES ON THE PAPER SITUATION AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT THINKS NEWS PAPER SITUATION TEMPORARY

In a letter to the President made public August 10th, in reply to a request for information, the Secretary of Agriculture gave the following summary of the situation as seen by the agricultural department experts and their forecast of future conditions:

"I have taken the matter up with the experts of the Forest Service and you may be interested in the following statement of what has been done by the department to relieve the situation.

"A news print paper is made up of approximately 75 per cent. ground wood pulp and 25 per cent. sulphite pulp. The Forest Service for several years has been making intensive investigations of both processes of pulp making. A very large percentage of ground wood pulp is now manufactured from spruce, the supply of which is becoming somewhat limited. In order to make possible a continuous supply of low-priced news print two main lines of investigation of the ground wood process were undertaken. The first included intensive studies of processes to obtain exact information concerning the many variables in manufacture. The second was to ascertain which of the numerous American species other than spruce are suitable for ground wood pulp.

"Tests made on twenty-two species, of which large quantities are available in the United States, have demonstrated that practically all have immediate promise as substitutes for spruce in the manufacture of the cheaper grades of papers, such as news, manilas, boxboard, etc. The news print manufactured from the ground wood pulp obtained experimentally from many of these woods was successfully used by the St. Louis Republic and the New York Herald in the printing of a limited number of their current edition.

"The results of these investigations have been incorporated in two bulletins issued by the department, entitled 'Experiments with Jack Pine and Hemlock for Mechanical Pulp,' published in 1912, and 'Ground Wood Pulp,' published in 1916. The latter covers the grinding of cooked and uncooked spruce and also the results of the investigations to determine suitable substitutes for spruce in ground wood pulp.

"One of the most important results of these investigations has been an increased amount of hemlock used for mechanical pulp in the East.

"A detailed study of sulphite pulp manufacturing process is now well advanced, and investigations similar to those described, to determine what species other than those now used are suitable for sulphite pulp, have been taken up. These studies are being pushed as rapidly as the resources available permit.

"Furthermore, the Forest Service has offered for sale at various times large amounts of timber on the national forests in logging chances favorable for pulp operations. These areas are located mainly in the Pacific Northwest and in Alaska, and offer combinations of suitable and cheap timber with large quantities of easily developed water power.

"Up to the present time it has not been possible to make such sales. The chief difficulty has been that the Western markets have been fully supplied and, in fact, mill capacity probably has been in excess of market demands. Western mills with the advantage of cheap power and cheap timber seemed to be unable to enter Eastern, and Middle Western markets, and the only opportunity for successful enterprise seemed to be the more or less uncertain possibility of being able to develop foreign and chiefly Oriental markets. These areas undoubtedly will be placed under contract as soon as economic conditions permit their development. They are offered under terms designed to encourage the development of the pulp and paper industry.

"Our experts are inclined to believe that the present conditions may be temporary. I am informed that before the war Eastern markets, which are the principal paper markets of the country, were fully supplied by American mills and the imports from several foreign countries. Prices as a result were so low as to offer little inducement to new mills in the West where our great timber reserves are located. It is probable that conditions after the war may be very similar to those which existed before. These factors have a direct bearing upon the suggestion regarding the construction and operation of government plants."

INTERNATIONAL PAPER COMPANY HEAD DEFENDS HIS COMPANY

In a long letter to the New York Herald dated August 9th, P. T. Dodge, president of the International Paper Company again defended his company from the criticism which the startling rising costs of paper have aroused.

He reiterates the statement that this company will have shortly "reached the maximum of capacity" so far as plants in the United States are concerned and states we must hereafter look to Canada for paper. He says that "paper makers" for years have suffered largely because of overproduction and repeats that the consumption of paper this year rose 100 per cent. "in a few months." He states that imports of sulphite pulp from Scandinavian countries have dropped from one thousand to "less than a hundred" tons a day.

He admits, however, that the International Company had a productive capacity leeway for increase of only 12 per cent., the normal annual increase being half that, and closes by saying:

"The publishers themselves in their efforts to purchase paper at famine prices and their attitude in compelling the government at Washington to place paper on the free list must hold themselves responsible for the present and future of the news print industry."

UNION PRINTERS ASK FOR PAPER INVESTIGATION

The danger that thousands of printers may be thrown out of work because of the high cost of white paper seriously concerned the delegates to the sixty-second annual convention of the International Typographical Union, which opened in Baltimore, August 14. John W. Hayes, secretary and treasurer of the Union, said the alarming shortage of print-paper was making it difficult for many newspaper corporations to continue business. In some cities, he said, there was already talk of consolidating two or more plants to reduce working forces and expenses.

THE POSSIBILITIES OF COTTON PAPER

In a letter to the New York Sun the possibilities of "cotton paper" are analyzed at some length by a cotton planter who says:

The cotton plant has a tougher fibre as an external coating than any other cultivated plant, excepting flax and hemp. The amount of material now wasted by present methods will be apparent to any one who examines the facts in relation to cotton growing. I believe that the waste could be used to exterminate the "boll worm" that annually costs the planters untold sums of effort and money.

The average of undeveloped "bolls" runs from 15 to 35 per cent. The undeveloped bolls are full of a starchlike mass. Each cotton plant is a compound machine, first forming starch, later on cotton fibre. Hence the outside fibre and the cotton in the partially developed and the unopened bolls, also the unpicked cotton, stained by frost possibly, all add to the value of the cotton stalks as paper pulp producers.

One acre of cotton that gives 1000 pounds of "seed cotton" (the lint and seed not yet separated) gives 333 pounds of lint cotton and 666 pounds of seed. An acre of cotton from which 1000 pounds of "seed cotton" have been picked will ordinarily have from 150 to 350 pounds of cotton left. It is not developed sufficiently to open (cotton bolls open like hickory nuts or chestnuts) as when fully matured.

An acre of cotton producing 1000 pounds of "seed cotton" gives by weight from 2500 to 3500 pounds of stalks and cotton bolls. The enormous quantity of material that is now wasted will be apparent.

We will use 1,000,000 bales as a computing base. The lint of 1,000,000 bales of cotton weighs 500,000,000 pounds. The seed from 1,000,000 bales weighs 1,000,000,000 pounds, while the stalks (dried out), bolls, etc., would weigh from 3,750,000,000 to 5,250,000,000 pounds. The weight of the annual crop varies. A 10,000,000 bale crop or any other number of million bales can be found by multiplying by the known number of bales produced. Thus a 15,000,000 bale crop would give from 28,000,000 to 30,000,000 tons of material which is now wasted. That would not only produce a higher grade of paper than poplar or spruce, but immense quantities of oil and also alcohol that is readily denatured.

It was found while experimenting that where the "level culture" had been practised, a large percentage being ridged, two rows could be cut with any mowing machine, and that it was easy to rake the stalks, in fact easier than to rake hay into "windrows"; also that the cotton racks used to haul seed cotton to the ginnery were suitable for handling the stalks.

Comparatively few renters or planters have mowing machines and hay rakes. The ginneries are not equipped with machines that are necessary if the alcohol, oils and pulp are to be saved as by-products. Nor is this all. The ginneries, if they added such machines as we used in our experiments would then be compelled to find a market for the pulp.

To the writer it seems but a very few years ago when cotton seed, beyond the few bushels required for seed to plant the next year's crop, was left in piles to decay. Millions of pounds were not even scattered over the land as a fertilizer. Then capitalists learned of the value of oil in the seed. Oil mills began to multiply; and last year 12,000,000,000 pounds of cotton seed were used by the mills that produce cotton seed oil and "cake" for feeding purposes.

PERIODICAL NOTES

J. H. GANNON has been elected president of The Ridgway Company, publishers of Everybody's Magazine and Adventure.

THE HIGH COST of living is hitting the periodicals. The Scientific American is advancing its subscription price from $3 to $4 October 1st. Factory goes up from $2 to $3; the American Boy, Abel's Photographic Weekly, Health Culture, National Sportsman and a dozen others also announce raises in rates.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES

THE Society for the Suppression of Vice has asked the John Lane Company to suppress Theodore Dreiser's last novel, "The Genius." It classes it as both lewd and profane.

SEPTEMBER 20 is the date set by the Britton Publishing Co. for the publication of Annie Fellows Johnston's "Georgina of the Rainbows." A first printing of 50,000 copies is announced.

"ENOCH CRANE," by F. Hopkinson Smith, will be an early publication of the Scribners.

This is a posthumous novel planned and begun by Mr. Smith and finished since his death by his son, F. Berkeley Smith, who also contributes a preface describing his father's method of planning and developing a novel.

C. N. AND A. M. WILLIAMSON, it appears, are the authors of "Where the Path Breaks," the novel recently published by The Century Co. under the pen-name of "Captain Charles de Crespigny." The book has recently been published in England, with the names of the authors on the title page and the name of the book changed to "The War Wedding."

IN JOSEPH PENNELL'S "Pictures of the Wonder of Work," to be published about September 15 by the J. B. Lippincott Co., there are fifty-two drawings and lithographs representing the dignity and power of modern labor. The Gary Steel Works, Chicago Stock Yards, a New York skyscraper, Charleroi, the Krupp Works at Essen, furnish some of the remarkable effects that prove Mr. Pennell's seeing eye and skilful hand.

THE BERLIN REPORT that Norman Angell, the brilliant author of "The Great Illusion" and other pacifist books, has been sentenced to eighteen months hard labor in an English prison for declining to take part in the war is not generally credited here. The basic thesis of "The Great Illusion," viz., the economic fallacy of war, is being steadily made more clear. Mr. Angell has been working earnestly for peace ever since the war broke out.

THE TITLE of Francis Neilson's new novel, shortly to be issued by the Bobbs-Merrill Company, has been changed from "Thirty Pieces of Silver" to "A Strong Man's House." The novel has present-day England for setting, and portrays the dramatic effect of war on a prominent English family. Mr. Neilson is an Englishman, an ex-member of Parliament, now living in this country, and he is probably best known as the author of "How Diplomats Make War."

DODD, MEAD & Co. are publishing to-day: "In Another Girl's Shoes," by Berta Ruck, a sparkling novel of England in war time, depicting the consequences arising when Vera Vayne, the "movie" actress, literally pushes the demure, well-bred little heroine into her shoes as the war-widow of the aristocratic Captain George Meredith; "The Chief Legatee," a republication of one of Anna Katharine Green's earlier mystery stories; "The Adventures of a Despatch Rider," by Captain W. H. L. Watson, of the British army; "Religion in Europe and the World Crisis," by Charles E. Osborne.

KENNETH GRAHAME, author of "The Golden Age," has compiled an anthology entitled "The Cambridge Book of Poetry for Children." Avoiding, on the one hand, poems in blank verse, in dialect, and in archaic language, and on the other, the whole corpus of verse written about children, Mr. Grahame has made his collection chiefly one of lyrical verse, because "as an introduction to English poetry there is no better portal" than this. "The Cambridge Book of Poetry for Children" will be published on September 8 by G. P. Putnam's Sons.

SOCIOLOGICAL workers say that it is much more difficult to develop the "gang spirit" in girls than in boys. Writers of juveniles have, it would seem, considered this psychological difference, for the average boy's book has almost always in its spirit and usually in its title the suggestion of a large group with one dominating spirit, while the book for girls is more apt to detail the adventures of its heroine with less regard for her "crowd." The titles of the Cupples & Leon new juveniles bear out this theory: "The Banner Boy Scouts Snowbound," "The Y. M. C. A. Boys on Bass Island," "Dorothy Dale's Strange Discovery," "Ruth Fielding in Moving Pictures," and "Ruth Fielding Down in Dixie."

IN LINE with our recent editorial on "What Shall We Do With the Would-be Bookseller?" is the following letter from a member of the Chautauqua Library School, who had attended the lectures on bookselling which Mr. B. W. Huebsch delivered there. "I have no definite plans for this winter, and I am quite anxious to try what I could do in a bookstore, with a view to having an interest in the business if I succeed and like it after trying it out. And so I decided to ask you if you will kindly suggest how best to go about it. I would go anywhere where there is an opportunity for experience. My library experience has been in the public library of a large city, and I have had some business—not much—and three years' work on a daily newspaper." The PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY will be glad to put any interested bookseller in touch with the woman who wrote this letter.

BUSINESS NOTES

BEAVER FALLS, PA.—R. B. Romig, of the Romig Shop, is planning to add a book department and wants publishers to get in touch with him.

CHICAGO, ILL.—Anton I. Jansky, bookseller, has moved from 140 South Wabash Avenue to 19 East Adams Street.

MUSCATINE, IA.—J. H. Helverson has purchased the bookstore of Wilson Goble on East Second Street.

NEW YORK CITY.—Thomas Nelson & Sons Publishing Co. has been incorporated with a capital of $50,000 by W. Thomson, S. F. Areson, and C. D. McKim. The new company is an adjunct of Thomas Nelson & Sons, necessitated by war conditions, to handle Nelson's Loose-Leaf Encyclopædia.

Castle, Mrs. Agnes Sweetman, and Castle, Egerton. Wind's will; il. by Stockton Mulford. N. Y., Appleton. c. 5+379 p. pls. D $1.35 n.

Romance of France at the close of the Napoleonic Wars. Geoffrey Swift, of the English army, and Colinette Hardi met in the Paris flower-market. She was but the heiress of a flower farm, where later the young man was cared for after being dangerously wounded in a duel. Under the impulse of youthful passion, he betrothed himself to her. In spite of the opposition of his family, when news came of his unexpected succession to a great title, he married this daughter of the soil. This mad marriage of Lord Maldon shocked society, which backed his family in trying to annul it. But the "wind bloweth where it listeth," and happiness was on the way for Colinette.

Dodge, L: Bonnie May; il. by Reginald Birch. N. Y., Scribner. c. 8+356 p. pls. D $1.35 n.

Fairy tale of the theater and what befalls a little girl who at first doesn't belong to any one. So Bonnie May adopts the Baron family, and scandalizes Mrs. Baron by her worldliness—and delights Victor by her frankness. Then Baggot, with his new play, arouses her attention, and she in turn catches the deep interest of Baggot's producer. She is too young to have her story end in getting married and living happily everafter. Besides, she has the mind of the great artist, she knows that the stage's make-believe is the truth—understood by everyone, and unlike the make-believe of life which says one thing and means another.

One of the author's early stories which has been out of print for some time. Tells of the disappearance of Georgian Ransom right after her wedding. She was found in a town, with a brother and a deaf and dumb twin-sister, believed dead. Her husband got no communication with her; and in the night, she threw herself into the falls. She left a strange will—about which her brother came forward. He knew about the Cause which drove Georgian to suicide, and to which she left her money. He also is marked for death. For an instant after his death, Georgian lifted her disguise to reassure her husband—her acting and his devotion could be relied on for their future.

McFee, W. Casuals of the sea; the voyage of a soul. [Garden City] N. Y., Doubleday, Page. 469 p. D $1.50 n.

The family of Gooderich might be called the hero. Story's three parts carry it along thru many years. When Minnie and Hannibal were young, their mother's misunderstanding of them and her struggles in the London suburb were all-important. Then Minnie grew up and went to the city, and calculatingly took the easiest way. Her mother, who had married after her misstep, had no sympathy for Minnie's advanced views. Finally, Minnie married the captain of a steamer. When it was Hannibal's turn to disgrace the family, he ran away to sea. That he signed on his brother-in-law's ship, completes the circle of the plot. He, who scorned money, or appearances, was the one who had the best adventure.

Onions, Berta Ruck [Mrs. Oliver Onions]. In another girl's shoes; il. by E. C. Caswell. N. Y., Dodd, Mead. c. 8+434 p. pls. D $1.35 n.

"And the consequences were" that Vera Wayne, the movie-actress, and Capt. Meredith's war-bride, refused to be his widow when he was killed. She just couldn't play up to what his people would expect. So she pushed the well-bred Rose White-lands into her place, and Rose got no chance to explain for weeks on end. The Merediths thought grief had destroyed her memory. When the Captain turned up, he did not long for Vera, but he did think Rose an adventuress. At this Rose showed much spirit. Vera now found that her divorce was not legal, and that she still loved her first husband. Meredith was a good sort, but hasty. Perhaps Rose kept him waiting before she put on his wife's shoes again.

- Tobenkin, Elias. Witte arrives; a novel; with a front. by J. Henry. N. Y., Stokes. c. 304 p. D $1.25 n.
Based on the experience of Jewish immigrants from Russia, novel tells what America has for those who ask her best. Aaron Witte came ahead, as is usual, got his start and was joined by his family. He and his wife decided to keep to Orthodox ways, but put no restrictions on their children. What he learned in school and the ideals of a revolutionist gave the set to young Emil's outlook. He went into journalism and his work soon told. Neither his mother nor his wife lived to see him "arrive." But Emil worked on, becoming a leader. Later their racial difference could not keep Emil and Barbara from marrying.

The Publishers' Weekly

Subscription Rates.

One year, postage prepaid in the United States, $5.00; foreign, $6.00.
Single copies, 10 cents. Educational Number, in leatherette, 50 cents; Christmas Bookshelf, 25 cents.

Advertising Rates.

One page	$25 00
Half page	14 00
Quarter page	7 00
Eighth page	4 00
One-sixteenth page	2 00

The above rates are for unspecified positions. Special rates for preferred positions (full pages only).

Higher rates are charged for the Summer Reading, Educational Number and Christmas Bookshelf, and for the monthly Book Review supplement sections.

Advertising copy should reach us Tuesday noon—earlier if proof is desired out-of-town. Forms close Thursday night.

Under the headings of "BOOKS WANTED" and "BOOKS FOR SALE" book-trade subscribers are given under their own names five nonpareil lines (exclusive of address) free advertising for specified books, not more than one title to the line, in any issue except special numbers, but not exceeding one hundred lines a year, a maximum of fifty lines under "Books Wanted" and fifty lines under "Books for Sale," and if over five lines are sent for either department in any one issue, or fifty lines for each department within the calendar year, the excess is at ten cents a line. Bills for this service will be rendered monthly. Objectionable books are excluded so far as they are noted.

In answering, please state edition, condition and price, including postage or express charges. Houses that will deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis should put [Cash] after their firm name. The appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the WEEKLY does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it endeavors to safeguard its columns by withholding the privileges of advertising should occasion arise, booksellers should take usual precautions in extending credit.

"Books Wanted" must be designated by actual title, not by "any."

Write your wants plainly, on one side of the sheet only. Illegible "wants" are ignored. The WEEKLY is not responsible for errors. Parties with whom there is no account must pay in advance.

Under "HELP WANTED" or for other small undisplayed advertisements, the charge is 10 cents a nonpareil line. No reduction for repeated matter. Count seven words to the line.

AN UNSOLICITED TESTIMONIAL

New York, July 8th, 1916.

THE VAIL-BALLOU COMPANY,
Binghamton, N. Y.

The writer has not had an opportunity earlier to write and express our appreciation of the prompt and efficient way in which you have carried forward the printing of the Typo Credit Book. In spite of the fact that the book was re-set from cover to cover and you were given the least possible time in which to do it, you completed your work on time and had the final sheets in the hands of the binder, so that we were able to make our deliveries on July 1st as we planned.

We want also to say that the printing and presswork is of the highest order, and so far not a single high-line has come to the writer's attention.

The Typo Credit Book for July, 1916, is by far the handsomest book that we have ever issued and is a credit to us, as well as to you who are responsible for the printing.

Thanking you for your successful efforts in our behalf, we are,

Yours very truly,

THE TYPO MERCANTILE AGENCY,

W. T. G. Weymouth, President.

A Leading Photoplay Producer adds his tribute to that of the many Clergymen, Actors, Authors, Critics and other Men and Women of Affairs who agree that "BEHOLD THE WOMAN!" is the Greatest Fiction Sensation of many years. Read the following letter from

COMMODORE J. STUART BLACKTON

Vice-President of THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY of America

My dear Mr. Harré:

I have just finished reading for the second time your wonderful story, "Behold the Woman!"

I read scenarios of books and manuscripts every month, but none has moved me so deeply nor filled me with such a desire to give my own personal attention to its production as your masterpiece.

I am very happy to have the motion picture rights and believe we are going to make history in the vizualization of this truly stupendous story.

It will take months to produce and cost a fortune in the making, but I believe that when completed "Behold the Woman!" will stand in a place all by itself in the motion picture hall of fame.

BEHOLD THE WOMAN!

By T. EVERETT HARRÉ

This novel is not alone the success of a season, but is proving our first claims that it would grow into tremendous popular favor like "Quo Vadis," "Ben Hur," etc. The sales have just begun. We ask your co-operation in continued displays and pushing the book. The Vitagraph Co.'s film will cost $200,000, and will unquestionably boost the sales.
